RESIDENCY PROGRAMME

Own your slice of Paradise in Europe

Welcome to Cyprus!

Imagine 320 days of sunshine, the crystal blue Mediterranean Sea, 66 blue-flag beaches, majestic sunsets, picturesque natural surroundings and a way of life similar to South Africa. This is all on offer in Cyprus – an English-speaking, full member of the EU.

The Mediterranean lifestyle is about scrumptious cuisine & enjoying life to the full. Cyprus represents being a very popular investment, retirement & relocation destination for South Africans. Properties in Cyprus offer exceptional value for money when compared to other European countries – especially homes right on or near to The Med. The choice of where to buy is very personal and the type of property depends on your lifestyle requirements, your budget and also your short, medium & long term plans.

The lush & beautiful city of Paphos on the Western side of the island is very similar to the Western Cape and year-on-year continues to enjoy the most demand from investors. There are 4 world class golf estates, an abundance of fine dining venues, numerous wine routes and a plethora of outdoor activities. Paphos is also a very cosmopolitan town and the entire picturesque province is the nicest and most secure part of the Island, where magical waterfront locations provide a sublime setting & idyllic lifestyle for discerning buyers.

The key benefit of buying a property in Cyprus and owning your slice of paradise is that property investment automatically comes with either acquiring permanent; tangibly benefitting your family for generations to come.

A new home in a new country is the achievement of a lifetime and an investment in the future for the next generation. In Cyprus the investment options really are the best. Living is laid back and you set your own pace. And what better place to do this than where the blue skies meet the Mediterranean Sea: on the beautiful island of Cyprus.

Cypriot Realty – a proudly South African company in operation for more than 13 years – can assist you. We are recognised and respected as Southern Africa's authoritative offshore investment specialists, promoting Cyprus as an ideal destination for acquiring permanent residency, property investment, immigration or retirement and starting an EU-based business - we understand investor's needs.

Dear Friends

From one father to another. Happy Father's Day. Its time we were spoilt – oh! doesn't that happen every day? Never mind on Sunday 20 June we will be extra specially spoilt. Perhaps as we will now officially be in winter you could cuddle up in bed until that coffee arrives and then take your family out to brunch or lunch. The restaurants need all the support they can get!

Sitting on the Stoep

I first met Jacob van Ruisdael with my family on the 12 September 1975 in the National Gallery of Scotland in Edinburgh. He was introduced as probably the greatest of the many Dutch painters who specialised in landscapes in the 17th century.

I agree, and he became a great family favourite for Tricia and me as we continued to meet him around the world. On that same first visit overseas when I was first exploring the world of international art I managed my first of many visits to the London Gallery and met him again. Then we touched on him at the Rijks Museum but especially years later when the Museum exhibited some paintings in Vancouver. The great exhibition was entitled "Masterpieces of the Rijks Museum, Vermeer, Rembrandt and the Golden Age of Dutch Art" which included several paintings by Jacob Isaacksz van Ruisdael 1628 – 1682 (and in the National Gallery Copenhagen).

Weymouth Bay by John Constable, 1816-17.
(www.wikimedia.org)

The one I liked best was one of his views of Haarlem.

He was famous for the way his clouds draped the sky and gave depth and breadth to his landscapes.

The other artist who likewise depicted great skies in his landscapes was born much later across the channel in England – John Constable 1776 – 1837. Weymouth Bay, one of his pictures in the National Gallery

Years later I spent a couple of hours alone in the Victoria and Albert Museum looking at about twenty paintings of the sky and clouds all painted by John Constable – an amazing artist and one I have known since boyhood (and probably you too) because of a schoolroom reproduction on the classroom wall. I little thought that I would one day see the originals in England and I always went to have a look at my favourites when I visited the National Gallery – the Haywain et al.

And, of course, as I told you before, my other schoolroom picture, the famous Hals painting 'The Laughing Cavalier' and the wonderful surprise I got when I walked into the Wallace Collection and there it was!

It's like unexpectedly meeting an old friend you haven't seen for ages but instantly recognise and can say 'hello'.

Actually, I'm sure that's what great art is – if you're lucky enough to be able to visit famous galleries you find a host of new friends and, if you are lucky enough still to return you can really cement your friendship. Having had a son living for some years in London (my favourite city) I walked and walked and was able to visit all the treasures their galleries, museums and collections display. What joy!

Well done Christine for arranging such a successful event on behalf of the Nature Association.

*"Boats sail on the rivers,
And ships sail on the seas;
But clouds that sail across the sky
Are prettier far than these."*

One of our favourite poets Christina Rossetti puts into words in the opening lines of her poem what other great artists put onto canvas. Doesn't it all go together? Especially if you add your own garden (or that of the whole beautiful Dainfern Estate) and surrounding trees to make up a glorious picture – with clouds, of course.

Take heart, let us all remain safe and healthy; and keep hope alive.

I think we are very lucky!

The New App

We are so excited that our new App is fully up and running and thank Janet for her patience and assistance to many residents in this changeover period. We look forward to years of use with our new App with increased functionality from our developers. We will keep you updated with the latest developments as they become live on the App.

Security Team

We thank our ever-efficient security team for the culmination of many hours of working with the SAPS, Broadacres Drive

Association and all the Estates in our area to facilitate the arrest of a suspect involved in crime in our area. It takes a lot of dedication and commitment to achieve success, and this is our ongoing dedication to all within our Estate. Security remains our number one priority!

As we hear about the Third Wave, it is a harsh reminder that COVID is still with us and we all need to be aware, be careful and be vigilant with our social distancing, sanitizing, washing of our hands and only going out when we must. If we all work together, then we look after each other.

Activities on the Estate

You are reminded of the many wonderful activities we offer on the estate including Yoga, Karate, Run/Walk for Life, Football, Tennis and Squash to mention only a few. These details are available on our website, our App as well as in the In Focus magazine.

Security Details

A reminder that we all need to keep our garage doors and all windows closed when we are not at home. Opportunists will take advantage of any chance when it is presented. We ask for your assistance if you see anything that does not look right – contact security on 011 469 0099 (this number is available 24 hours a day).

Stay warm, stay healthy and stay home when possible.

How to make your home extra cozy this winter

As a homeowner we want our home to feel cozy without going wild on heating costs. Yet, likely, 90 % of homes are facing a massive increase in heating expenses.

Here are some tricks and tips worthwhile sharing to keep your home extra cozy this winter.

- Using the fireplace creates warmth and sets the scene for family gatherings. In addition, fireplaces bring life and an ambiance to your home.
- Rearranging your living room furniture, might seem like a lot of work, but will give your home a cozier effect.
- Plush fabrics and upholstery add warmth, even without a roaring fire.
- Super soft throws combined with textured blankets and cushions for snuggling and relaxing during the winter evenings.
- Adding rugs that display colour, pattern, and texture makes your home look cozy and comfortable.

- Scented candles are a simple way to lighten up your home during the winter days.
- Candles work perfectly for any room. They turn an ordinary bathroom into an intimate space for relaxation.
- Create a cozy, comfortable feeling in the lounge and dining area.
- If you do have a fireplace, nothing beats sitting around a roaring fire, with a glass of merlot, cabernet, or even gluhwein to chase away those winter blues.

Need any advice with your interiors, we are happy to help. www.villabiancointeriors.com

"Prepare beds for winter annuals by working in generous amount of compost and superphosphate.."

No dreary Winter Garden

Your winter garden doesn't need to be as dreary as the weather.

The days might be shorter now, and the nights long and cool, but 'green fingers' will still be twitching and there is always something to do in the garden. So, dress up warmly and dig right in!

Things you can do this winter in your garden

- ☑ Hoe borders regularly to keep down the weeds.
- ☑ Be water-wise.
- ☑ Harvest lettuce, radish, other salads.
- ☑ Sharpen your pruning shears.
- ☑ Send your lawn mower and brush cutter in for servicing and new blades.
- ☑ Mow your lawn every second week or as required.

Also picking sweet pea flowers regularly will make the plants produce more. Plant a creeper with bright yellow flowers over a trellis next to your patio. Focal plants like flax (phormium) are eye-catching in winter landscaping. Planting blossom trees like flowering peaches, plums, cherries and crab apples.

Prepare beds for winter annuals by working in generous amount of compost and superphosphate. Sweet peas, Poppies, Daisies and Primula are some of the most significant flowers to plants.

Numerous gardens have been inspired by the poppies. They are beautiful to look at, especially when the sunlight shines through their translucent colours. These have proven their ability to transform drab winter gardens into show-stopping displays. Early June is the right time to plant poppy seedlings to ensure that they weave their magic in your garden this spring.

It is also the right time for you to start planting your sweet peas. With their multitude of sweetly scented pastel blooms, sweet peas are the ultimate forerunner of spring and they make excellent cut flowers. Just decide if you are going for the bush or the climbing variety and choose a sunny spot in front of your patio, entrance or along a pathway where the sight and smell of the flowers can be fully experienced.

Daisies are a gardener's best friend as they cheerful and easy to grow. You can choose from the wide range of the daisy's family. Although most of them warrant a place in the garden, no matter what level of gardening proficiency is they bring a bloom to the garden in late spring. Plant them in any sunny spot in well-drained, compost-enriched soil. They also tolerate little shade but not too much in direct sun.

REMEMBER:

- ☑ Bird feeding station.
- ☑ Get your fine compost for your citrus trees and papaws.
- ☑ Get your slug and snail control.
- ☑ Harvest early potatoes.
- ☑ Look out for weeds.
- ☑ Cover tender flowers against the frost.
- ☑ Transplant roses now if necessary.

Lawn

Winter is many gardener's nightmare. It means a muddy mess or a sad, bare turf. Make sure you maintain your lawn this winter to keep it looking good. Cut down on mowing, buy some of the contour lawn dressing or fine compost for your lawn to encourage root developing, keep lush and healthy growth, make sure you water your grass after lawn dressing it. Consistently rake your lawn, remove the fallen leaves and other debris. Remove any broad leaf weeds.

The recognition of Muslim Marriages

The legal status of marriages solemnized in terms of Muslim rites, have faced many complex issues in the courts over the past few years.

Previously, Muslim marriages were not recognised as having the same legal status as civil marriages, which in turn lead to discrimination. Women were denied benefits which they would “normally” have, such as a claim for maintenance upon dissolution of a marriage and inheritance in terms of an intestate estate. However, in the case of Daniels v Campell N.O and Others, the position regarding a spouse’s right to benefit from her husband’s estate changed and the court ruled that the term “spouse” must include a husband or wife married according to Muslim rites.

In 2014, Imams (Muslim clerics) were officially appointed as marriage officers in terms of the Marriages Act. This enabled spouses to a Muslim marriage to enter into a valid marriage, where the marriage could be solemnized by a marriage officer duly registered as such.

The proprietary consequences of a Muslim marriage were then that the Muslim marriage will be regarded the same as a civil union. This meant that the spouses would be regarded as married in community of property unless the spouses entered into an antenuptial contract.

In December 2020, in the case of President of the RSA and Another v Women’s Legal Centre Trust and Others; Minister of Justice and Constitutional Development v Esau and Others, the Supreme Court of Appeal had to decide on the following:

1. Whether the State is under an obligation to enact legislation under the Constitution to recognise Muslim marriages as valid marriages and to regulate the consequences thereof.

2. Whether the provisions in question are inconsistent with Section 15 of the Constitution; and
3. Whether the interim measure should have retrospective operation.

The Supreme Court of Appeal held that, Section 12 (2) of the Children’s Act 38 of 2005 applies to Muslim marriages concluded after the date of the order. The prescribed minimum age must be complied with when entering into a marriage and should the child be above the minimum age, his or her consent is required.

It was further held that, the requirements for the validity of a customary marriage apply mutatis mutandis to Muslim marriages. When dealing with divorce proceedings for a marriage validly concluded in terms of Sharia law, the provisions of the Divorce Act shall be applicable; provided the Muslim marriages are treated as if they are married out of community of property, unless there are agreements to the contrary. When dealing with divorce proceedings, Section 7(3) of the Divorce Act is applicable. The court must consider all factors when dealing with a husband who is a spouse to a polygamous Muslim marriage, including any contract or agreement.

Conveyancers are no longer required to refer to Muslim marriages as “unmarried” and can now describe the spouses as Married in terms of Muslim Rites.

Ways to spruce up Your Home this Winter

Wall Decorations

Tired of looking at the same white walls? Think of them as a blank slate. Update your house walls with colourful decals, a stunning mural, or peel-and-stick wallpaper. Tapestries, wall hangings, canvas, shadow boxes, and wooden art are only a few ideas for the living and family rooms. Macramé, and your own crafty creations add a personal touch. Warm colours against white walls are sure to draw eyes to an otherwise drab room.

Plants and Flowers

Fresh flowers are a perfect way to keep your home bright and colourful during the winter. Open curtains and blinds to let the sunshine in! Visit your local florist for long-lasting blooms, such as carnations and potted orchids. Money tree plants are known for bringing good luck and positive vibes. Snake plants, aloe vera, English ivy, and bamboo filter out airborne chemicals while they circulate oxygen into the room.

"Fresh flowers are a perfect way to keep your home bright and colourful during the winter ..."

On a blank wall, build a vertical garden with prefabricated kits of plastic, metal, or wood. You can also create one from scratch. Make sure the wall is solid and strong enough to handle the weight of the planter and its greenery. If natural light from windows or a skylight is not available, you can install indoor plant lights.

Kitchen

Spice up the kitchen with stick on tile for the backsplash. Hang baskets with silk flowers from the ceiling. Give the kitchen a stylish makeover with new wallpaper, or borders over a fresh paint job. Shelf paper with muted or colourful patterns gives cupboards a cleaner look. Flowers, fruits, vegetables, and bird graphics are fun to look at each day. Natural greenery and hydroponic gardens are Mother Nature's way of reminding that you can nurture your green thumb during the winter, too!

Aesthetics

Spruce up your bedroom and living room decor with velvet, silk or merino wool throws and pillows. Hot colours with bold patterns give you something different to look at, so cover up old chairs with new fabric. Large and small mirrors reflect light and colours throughout the room. Cheerful curtains dress up windows. Check out flowers, honeybees, hummingbirds, kittens, and butterflies for any room in your home.

Scents

Scents that say "winter" are a nice way to sweeten your home on a cold day. Cinnamon, pine needles and evergreen, apples, cotton candy, peppermint, chocolate chip cookies fresh out of the oven- it is all good. Potpourri, candles, diffusers, and incense tickle your nose.

Camping at Tsendze

Kruger National Park

Looking through some of my old videos I came across one I made two years ago when my son and I spent a week camping at Tsendze in the Kruger Park.

Tsendze Camp

Tsendze is a lovely place to camp. Very rustic, no Wifi and no electricity. There were hardly any other people there so we had the whole place to ourselves.

On the first night, sitting around the fire, we heard a Barred Owl and a Scops Owl calling. The next morning we went to look for them. I thought it would be like looking for a needle in a haystack but we soon saw the Barred Owl flying around and eventually perching in a tree with one eye closed allowing me to take a photograph. I looked very carefully in the higher trees for the Scops Owl but surprisingly found it in quite a small tree not higher than about 7 feet above the ground. It had both eyes closed and looked fast asleep. My son asked me if he should call it up by using its call on his cellphone. I said that it probably would not work in the daytime but he tried it and to my surprise the bird opened its eyes and uttered its distinctive call.

Top: Barred Owl / Above: Scops Owl

We found that unlike in other camps the Tree Squirrels at Tsendze were extremely tame. They would climb on all our tables and were quite adept at opening tins and bags in search of biscuits and sweets. When my son went to shower and I was waiting for him I relaxed in a camping chair and watched one of these squirrels messing about at my feet. Suddenly it jumped on my lap and seemed quite content until I said: "And what do you want?" It got the fright of its life, jumped from my lap and disappeared.

We had decided to spend one night in the overnight hide and that proved to be quite exciting. We got there at about 4pm and prepared for the night. Outside it seemed very quiet and lifeless but as soon as the sun went down everything suddenly seemed to come alive. A Dwarf Bittern came down to set itself up in a tree looking down into the water and staying there for at least two hours without moving. A Purple Heron stood for a long time with open wings still trying to get the last rays of the disappearing sun. Water Dikkops arrived while a lonely elephant and an old Buffalo walked along the waters' edge. When darkness fell a large herd of Buffaloes surrounded the hide and we could hear them munching away almost right through the night.

It had been very hot most of the time. At 10am it was already more than 45° C. We would drive around in the morning and spend the rest of the day in the shade or the pool at Mopani and go for another drive later in the day. We came across a small herd of elephants lying down in the shade as if they were dead. I have never seen this before. There was this very large beautiful dam not far away and here they were lying as if it was their last resting place before dying. We went to see this dam and were surprised that there was not much game but we saw a lovely flock of Black Winged Pratincoles.

BIRD OF THE MONTH

by André Marx

foraging in trees and on the ground. The larger seeds of wild grasses and other small plants are preferred. Buds and soft fruits are also taken and insects are eaten, while nestlings seem to be fed exclusively on caterpillars. Birds will also probe in aloes for nectar.

This small bird, which grows to a length of up to 15 centimetres, is quite flexible in its choice of nesting place. Both parent birds collect twigs and any fluff and feathers they can find as nesting material and put it all together in an untidy nest in a tree. Cape Sparrows are said to be monogamous, with breeding pairs staying together all year round and are thought to maintain a partner relationship until one of them dies. Clutches contain between two and six eggs, but typically three or four. Both parents incubate the eggs during the day although at night only the female incubates while the male roosts outside or in the nest. Breeding happens primarily in the summer months, particularly from November to February.

When settled agriculture arrived in the Cape Sparrow's range hundreds of years ago it adapted to cultivated land and with the arrival of settlement it has moved into towns and cities where it has fared well. In Dainfern it is a ubiquitous species and we admire this endearing and cheerful bird which is very much part of our environment.

Cape Sparrow

Passer melanurus

When checking through the list of birds featured in this column recently it dawned on me that one of our most familiar birds that we may see nearly every day has not been featured. So, this month is devoted to the Cape Sparrow.

This is actually our most handsome, brightly coloured sparrow, with males and females showing different plumage. The male has a distinctive black head and throat with a striking white crescent extending from the eye around the ear. The female has a pale grey head with a diffuse pale crescent. House Sparrow and Southern Grey-headed Sparrow lack the distinctive facial pattern of the Cape Sparrow.

Pairs and small flocks are resident in the estate and can often be seen at bird feeders and in gardens. This is a social bird that often occurs in small groups, particularly where food is provided. The Cape Sparrow mostly eats seeds, Conserve our soil!

All life on land depends on soil. Without it, plants and microorganisms wouldn't grow, and then animals wouldn't have anything to eat. But what is soil anyway? Soil is composed of clay, sand, silt, organic matter, air, water and biology. Each of the items interact and produce certain systems which allow life to live off soil.

One of the most important components in soil is air. Air is needed in the soil for microorganisms to break down organic material. Usually, the biology in the soil (E.g. worms, frogs, beetles) will aerate the soil to levels which are in balance with the particular soil system. But when we turn the soil to make it look fluffy, we cause excessive air to enter the soil, which accelerates oxidation of organic matter (releases as CO₂), much faster than any natural rate. In fact, since the dawn of agriculture, the world's soils have lost 133bn tons of carbon. Several years of continuous tilling without replacing the organic matter, will quickly deplete the organic matter in the soil. The organic matter is the food source for biology and with the loss of organic matter due to unnatural aeration, the biology quickly dies out and plants become susceptible to pests and disease.

The turning motion also breaks up the soil into very small pieces, which seals any pores in the soil, preventing rainwater from infiltrating. This results in water flowing rapidly off the farm when it rains, and carrying away the rich top soil. Soil in South Africa is lost at a rate of 4.8 ton/ha/yr and it is only replaced at a rate of 0.15 ton/ha/yr, which means that at some time in the future we will have no soil left to farm.

A solution is to conserve our soil using practices like Conservation Agriculture, where we minimize disturbances to the soil and we put back carbon into the soil through composting and mulching. It aims to maintain the health of biology in the soil, which in turn leads to healthier crops.

BAGS OF ♥ Community Outreach

in the Dainfern Community

May was an extremely busy month with a bumper Dainfern Donation Day which filled up the garage at 1361 and many more donations came in from 1811. Thank you so much to every single person who took the time to deliver their gently used clothes, bags, toys, bed linen and books – and to all those who supplied brand new blankets, beanies, jerseys, coats and shoes to our Winter Warmth Drive. A final count showed that we collected over 200 blankets of all sizes! We were also blessed with 30 food parcels which were divided amongst three different projects we support and were greatly appreciated. We also shifted 5 bakkie loads of mixed donations to several indigent communities! A huge cash donation from the Martin Family has allowed us to contribute to purchasing many blankets and food parcels this month and we never forget the regular generous funding we receive from several residents.

Sole Sisters!

The little things are actually the big things! Thank you Santie of the SAME Foundation for sending me these pics, from Sigagule. This little girl who visited the clinic has been battling with the slip-slops on the left for so long...her only shoes! Santie gifted her with a pair of the brand new slip-slops donated earlier this year by us, Bags of ♥, most of which came from the Dainfern residents. We are now collecting all sizes of warm shoes for children of two years old up to 15. Heartfelt thanks to everyone who donates to us either financially or by way of clothing and food, bed linen and blankets. Every contribution makes a big difference to so many lives.

MaDD Function at Clubhouse for Sean Williams & his Live Life Always team

(On Thursday 13th May, the MaDD (Making a Difference in Dainfern) ladies held their second function at the Dainfern Clubhouse. We are a group of residents from different countries and backgrounds, but with the same goals and intentions of providing upliftment wherever we can whilst having a whole lot of fun and social interaction in the process!

This environmentally-focused event raised a substantial amount for legendary Sean Williams and his Live Life Always (LLA) team who have recently been making front page news for their incredible efforts in cleaning up the northern suburbs of Johannesburg. Sean's compelling talk and introduction to all his team was followed by two emotive speeches from ladies who described how joining in the clean ups with LLA have been life changing for them.

Himkaar Singh of The Compost Kitchen also spoke about what we humans are doing to the earth, how to assist it recover and about his local business. He and other recycling/environmental companies including TurfNet, Kleen-Up, Whole Earth and Safe Waste Solutions also attended the function, sharing their knowledge with attendees – and we extend our thanks to them, too.

We thank Six33 for giving us use of the bar for the evening, for providing delicious snacks and attentive service especially Tyron who looked after us all evening! We are so grateful to those who attended the function and to our generous sponsors who provided fabulous raffle prizes! These included Jonny's Mozambiquan Restaurant, Heineken, Harwood Family, Williams family, Jackal Creek, Chapters Fragrances, Face by Design Beauty, Le Morgan Cookware & Casseroles, Valpre, Pure Skin, Lil' Kitchen - and a surprise food hamper donation to every member of the LLA team from Jackie Stanton.

Big thanks too, to resident artist Robyn Chislett for again donating one of her gorgeous paintings for our silent auction.

If you would like to contribute to Sean and his team (all volunteers) so they can keep up the great work, you can donate into their account: Sean Williams Living Creatures Trust Bank (PBO) / Nedbank, Current Account Number 1042469350 / Branch number: 198765

We look forward to bringing you our next event in a couple of months - hope to see you all there!

Shoe Donation

Bags of ♥ donated 10 pairs of shoes to the Live Life Always Team, who desperately needed new footwear as on average, they walk up to 20km/day. Sean and his team were delighted by this gesture.

"The cost of sanity"

When living with a mental illness, the price of remaining mentally stable is expensive. This matter is quite sensitive to me at a personal level, as I know the full might of this unfortunate reality.

Dr. Samke J. Ngcobo

"...Seeing a psychologist, psychiatrist or occupational therapist should not be deemed a luxury..."

The most glaring challenge is the financial impact of attending to one's mental health along with the difficulty in ease of access.

Despite a paradigm shift with regards to who is eligible for mental healthcare services, major misconceptions remain. There remains a belief that mental healthcare is limited to a particular demographic group of people that is affluent or is suited to a specific racial group only.

Mental healthcare should not exist as a status symbol as it is an essential commodity in ensuring our holistic wellbeing.

What does one do when they realise that they would like intervention related to their mental wellbeing? What quality of care does one receive when they do not have medical aid? Do they know where to go or who to approach? When they do have medical aid, to what extent are they supported by their medical aid regarding their specific diagnosis?

I have lived with a mental illness for 2 decades and have only found my compass in remaining stable, in recent years. Establishing my rhythm with it is still a work in progress.

Without downplaying my struggle related to affording my mental healthcare, I am often humbled and drawn to empathise with those who live in poverty concurrently with a mental illness. Once the mental healthcare worker has advocated for them, who listens and subsequently acts on their behalf?

I have worked in community health clinics in various districts during my 6 month rotations both as a medical officer and as a registrar in psychiatry and am well acquainted with the frustration and pain of both my colleagues and consultants alike at the limited resources. Having important medication out of stock has been a redundant sad song, the long waiting lists and the long queues are enough to discourage any dedicated mental healthcare worker, yet one perseveres.

Difficulties remain within the private sector as well. My own mental healthcare is incredibly expensive and does not feel like a luxury at all. I remain grateful to have access to it, nonetheless. Despite this, I am angered by the fact that many medical aid services do not fully cater to the various important aspects related to mental healthcare if at all. Seeing a psychologist, psychiatrist or occupational therapist should not be deemed a luxury. The benefits are capped and are not tailor made to the existing problem.

One sincerely looks forward to the day when mental healthcare is prioritised and is taken as seriously as other diseases.

Boost Your Immunity

against viruses this winter with a detox and the 6 most powerful nutrients

L-Glutathione

One of the most potent antioxidants produced within the body, which helps the body get rid of anything that causes cell damage. The other benefits of L-glutathione include the following:

- Anti-ageing.
- Reducing stress.
- Reducing skin damage.
- Reducing cell damage
- Treatment of glaucoma and cataracts.
- Reducing insulin resistance
- Fighting autoimmune disease.
- Reducing the health consequences of uncontrolled diabetes.
- Preventing respiratory disease.

Vitamin C*

This is an essential vitamin which plays an important role in boosting the immune system. Additionally, this vitamin helps:

- Reduce skin wrinkling.
- Manage high blood pressure.
- Lower the risk of heart disease.
- Decrease uric acid levels within the body.
- Reduce the risk of chronic disease.
- Prevent iron deficiency.

Quercetin*

This product is an anti-inflammatory, which increases the body's immune response to infection. The other benefits of Quercetin include:

- Prevention of other infections
- Reducing blood pressure
- Reducing the risk of heart disease
- Easing allergy symptoms
- Reducing the risk of cancer
- Lowering the risk of chronic brain disorders

Selenium & Zinc*

Selenium and Zinc are both minerals which help drive the normal processes of the body, such as metabolism, wound healing and immune function. These minerals additionally aim to:

- Boost your immune system to help fight infection

- Support your metabolism
- Reduce risk of certain cancers
- Protect against heart disease
- Prevent mental decline
- Support skin cell production

Vitamin D3*

This is a fat-soluble vitamin that promotes the absorption of various minerals, such as Calcium, Magnesium and Phosphate. This vitamin is produced within the body when exposed to sunlight, and assists in boosting immunity. The benefits of Vitamin D include:

- Reducing depression
- Boosting weight loss
- Fights disease
- Reduces the risk of calcium deficiency

Coenzyme Q10

A potent anti-oxidant that assists with energy production, and may help in:

- Treating heart failure
- Anti-aging

- Lowering blood pressure
- Reducing the chances of a heart attack
- Preventing migraine headaches

*recommended in the prevention and treatment of COVID-19.

FINANCE

The future of money – part 8

What is Ethereum?

By Kreaan Singh

Previous articles have mainly looked at cryptocurrencies from the perspective of an alternative financial system. In this article, we will discuss Ethereum, which, although also a cryptocurrency, actually looks to solve a very different problem from Bitcoin. Bitcoin is built to be money, whereas Ethereum is built to decentralise computing power.

"...This means that all information is completely transparent from the beginning. It also means that it is incredibly difficult to hide corruption or fake a transaction, as every computer on the network records and monitors every detail of all the programs running on the network..."

In today's world, most software applications run on central servers and databases – things like Facebook, Google, the banks, and property registries. Because of this, these services are highly controlled, are not transparent, and are often an easy target for hackers. This poses a threat to customers, as private and financial information are frequently exposed in a hack. We also give these services an unprecedented amount of information about us, which they are commonly known to exploit. Facebook is notorious for this and has been called to court on multiple occasions.

Rather than storing information on a central server, Ethereum attempts to solve this by distributing computer code (called smart contracts) around the world on a network of computers that anyone can access. This means that all information is completely transparent from the beginning. It also means that it is incredibly difficult to hide corruption or fake a transaction, as every computer on the network records and monitors every detail of all the programs running on the network. To cheat the system, you would have to own more than half of the computers in the network, of which there are hundreds of thousands, if not millions.

An example of where smart contracts could be implemented is the automation of property ownership transfers, which currently takes months and is quite costly. By storing property deeds as unique digital tokens, the transfer of a property becomes as simple as sending a cryptocurrency transaction that finalises in minutes. Another example is the automated and transparent distribution of tax money to government services. You would be able to see exactly where your tax money goes and how it is spent. In recent developments, smart contracts are widely being used to decentralise finance, enabling people to provide loans directly to one another with no 3rd party in the middle. Where all of this becomes really powerful is that once the smart contract is created, it is completely automated, requiring no human intervention.

Now, where does the cryptocurrency Ethereum fit into this? Well, to run any program on the Ethereum blockchain requires a fee to be paid. Ether is the currency of the Ethereum blockchain, used to pay for smart contracts to be executed. It just so happens that Ether has become an amazing investment opportunity itself, as well as being a means of payment for other goods and services in the physical world. While speculation is mainly driving the price of Ether today, there is still a budding ecosystem of applications being built using Ethereum. This has placed Ethereum as the number 2 cryptocurrency after Bitcoin.

If you are interested in learning about Ethereum, Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies, CoinEd offers private courses for individuals, corporate workshops, and school curriculum integrations.

MaDD

Hello there! We are the MaDD ladies (Making a Difference with Dainfern) - a group of compassionate residents from different countries and backgrounds, but all with the same goals and intentions of providing upliftment to those in need, wherever we can - and have a whole lot of fun and social interaction in the process!

Since forging a bond with one another and pooling our varied talents and areas of creativity, we have held two functions this year in Dainfern. The first one which was held on April 13th 2021 featured dynamic guest speaker, and founder of the TEARS Foundation, Mara Glennie, who delivered an emotive talk about the incredible work she does for abandoned and abused women.

Our second speaker on May 13th was legendary environmentalist Sean Williams who brought along his entire Live Life Always team to talk about the environment and how they are cleaning up the northern suburbs on a regular basis - and how everyday people like us can jump in to assist.

We raised substantial funding for each of those organisations and most importantly, we were highly instrumental in creating awareness for them.

We have many more fun events in the pipeline to uplift those in need and to provide an environment within Dainfern where people can meet and network with like-minded individuals to make dreams come true!

We look forward to bringing you our next event in a couple of months time - so keep your eyes open for notices and invitations - we hope to see you all there!
