Dear Residents

Nature Association Update

By Olivia, Youngson and teams

The month of April has brought lots of people walking in and around our Nature Areas which was lovely to see, and the interaction with the walkers is always pleasant.

We have managed to keep up with the invasive weeding in and around areas for this time of the year. We removed the moth catchers, morning glory, bug weed, blackjack, lantana, syringa, alternanthera pungens burweed, and cestrum, which are all visible from the golf cart tracks and trail areas.

We have now headed into the bush areas, starting at the Montagu/Bentwood grasslands, rocky ridge, olive walk, olive walk grasslands and assisting with the river clean ups in between. The reeds and hyacinth in the Sawgrass dams are always needing attention to keep them under control and removing them when necessary. A new short gully close to the entrance is now needed by the sewerage manhole, this should be completed before the end of April. Flower beds are always kept maintained and replanted if need be, weeding is ongoing.

April Festivities

Our Easter festivities were absolutely thrilling with the assistance of Halo Aviation (our aerial medic partner) who dropped hundreds of easter eggs from their helicopter for the children to collect, share and enjoy. There was huge excitement all around. The children could also enjoy the jumping castle, slip and slide, cute petting zoo as well as fun tattoos. The vibe was incredible as live music accompanied the special spit braai provided by SIX33.

Oliver Goldhill on being the Dainfern Golf Club Club Champion 2024. Over the two days, his score was an incredible  $70 + 66 = 136$  Gross (-8).

Congratulations

We congratulate the following winners of the Men's Club Championships 2024:-

Matthew Leonard on winning the Junior Club Championship Title 2024 with scores of  $74 + 72 = 146$  Total Gross.

Senior Men's Club Champion for 2024 - Mr. Neale Gandy and his scores were  $74 - 71 = 145$ .

OPERATIONAL REPORT

We congratulate Heinrich Bruiners on his spectacular win of the Stella Artois Players Championship 2024, hosted by Dainfern Golf Estate. The weather was picture perfect, the course in tip top condition and all the teams – from Golf, Turfnet, Golf Data, SIX33, the Board and all the staff at the DHA pulled together to ensure this was a highly successful event.

Golf Data

We are currently dusting the greens heavily once a month during the growing season which is extremely beneficial for the health of the turf grass plant and the longevity of sand-based greens.

The sand helps to dilute the thatch and control the organic layer. The sand also helps protect the crown of the plant where other diseases can occur. This practice also helps to protect the leaf blades from the constant shearing action from the mower blades and helps alleviate the stress from foot traffic. The sand creates a smoother playing surface and assists to keep the greens firm and true.

Maintenance

We have finally completed the project to redo ALL our road names across the Estate. This was a huge undertaking and we thank the team who coordinated the project. Our maintenance staff have recently received their new uniforms too – we are very proud of them.

GARDENING

May in the garden

A wonderful time

May is a wonderful month in the garden as the cold winter days approach.

Prepare beds for winter annuals by working in generous amount of compost and superphosphate.

Sweet peas, poppies, daisies and primulas are some of the most significant flowers to plants.

Numerous gardens have been inspired by the poppies. They are beautiful to look at, especially when the sunlight shines through their translucent colours. These have proven their ability to transform drab winter gardens into show-stopping displays. Mid-May and early June is the right time to plant poppy seedlings to ensure that they weave their magic in your garden this spring.

- Start protecting your frost tender plants from cold with frost cover or hessian.
- House plants should be watered less frequently as temperature drops.

- Reduce the amount of watering of your kikuyu lawn, twice a month will be enough.
- Keep feeding your winter veggies, but make sure the beds are damp before you feed them. Feed with organic contour compost.
- Water Camellias, Rhododendrons, Magnolias and Azaleas, then mulch with organic contour compost.
- Attract birds to your garden by feeding them during winter.
- Before putting away your lawnmower and trimmers for winter, give them a thorough clean and take them off to the lawnmower specialist for a general overhaul and to have the blades sharpened.
- Clear up autumn leaves from your garden and your gutters.

Lawn:

Winter is many gardeners' nightmare. It means a muddy mess or a sad, bare turf. Make sure you maintain your lawn this winter to keep it looking good. Cut down on mowing, buy some of the contour lawn dressing or fine compost for your lawn to encourage root developing, keep lush and healthy growth, make sure you water your grass after lawn dressing it. Consistently rake your lawn, remove the fallen leaves and other debris. Remove any broad leaf weeds.

Here's why your primary residence should not be in your own name

WHICH STRUCTURE SHOULD HOUSE YOUR PRIMARY RESIDENCE?

For many people, their primary residence is not just a property. It's a sanctuary, a symbol of security, and one of their most treasured assets. Many advisors will suggest you keep your primary residence in your own name because of tax reasons. But this is a big mistake! Your home is your haven; therefore, you must ensure that one of the assets you want to protect most has proper structuring in place.

4 Pitfalls of keeping your primary residence in your own name

Firstly, your property won't be protected if anything happens to you financially, as you don't benefit from total asset protection in the same way trusts do. Secondly, the property will form part of your deceased estate one day, resulting in more costs at death. Thirdly, it will result in you being able to get less financing for your investment properties (if your primary residence is mortgaged) because of the debt exposure on your own name. Lastly, there may also be some negative tax implications.

How to protect your primary residence with the correct structures

When it comes to safeguarding your primary residence, proper structuring is key. Trusts are an attractive choice for property investors because they are such powerful protection tools. I always suggest putting your primary residence in one of two places: In a company with a Holdings Trust holding the shares in the company or your Family Trust. Each structuring option offers several advantages, and deciding which one to use depends on your unique circumstances and financial goals.

Proper structuring of your primary residence is paramount for long-term financial security. And while the allure of capital gains tax savings may tempt you to keep your primary residence in your own name, the potential risks and limitations far outweigh the benefits.

They say home is where the heart is. By placing your home into the proper structure, you can safeguard your home, optimise your property portfolio, and keep the heart of your family beating strong.

LEGAL MATTERS

90-Day notice to the bank to cancel your existing bond

Written by Tamaryn Campbell - Attorney, Conveyancer and Notary Public

In the intricate process of selling property in South Africa, one critical aspect often overlooked is the requirement to give a 90-day notice to the bank to cancel the bond associated with the property. This notice period is vital for ensuring a smooth transition of ownership and settling financial obligations tied to the property's mortgage bond.

When a property owner decides to sell, they must inform their bank of their intention to cancel the bond. This notification must be provided in writing and should include essential details such as the seller's name, bond account number, property address, and the proposed date of cancellation. This formal notice gives the bank ample time to process the cancellation, calculate any outstanding bond amounts, and prepare the necessary documentation for the property transfer.

The 90-day notice period is designed to protect the interests of both the seller and the bank. For sellers, it allows sufficient time to complete the sale transaction without being rushed, ensuring that all parties involved have the necessary documentation and financial arrangements in place. Additionally, it provides an opportunity for sellers to address any outstanding issues related to the property's bond before finalizing the sale.

From the bank's perspective, the 90-day notice period enables them to assess the financial implications of the bond cancellation accurately.

It gives the bank time to calculate any outstanding amounts owed by the seller, including the outstanding bond balance, accrued interest, and administrative fees. By receiving timely notice, the bank can streamline the cancellation process, reducing the risk of errors or delays.

Failure to provide the 90-day notice can result in various complications. Delays in the bond cancellation process may prolong the property transfer, causing inconvenience to both the seller and the buyer. Moreover, sellers who fail to comply with this requirement may incur financial penalties or additional charges from the bank.

Therefore, it is imperative for property sellers in South Africa to understand and adhere to the 90-day notice requirement when cancelling a bond. By giving the bank ample time to process the cancellation, sellers can facilitate a smoother property transfer process and avoid potential pitfalls associated with non-compliance. Ultimately, compliance with this regulation contributes to a more efficient and transparent real estate market in South Africa.

The ringing of Cape Vultures

As I mentioned in previous articles, the Witwatersrand Bird Club was very involved in ringing birds to trace their migration routes. We spent much time wading through marshes and dams to ring different herons, egrets and cormorants. In those days this was quite safe, the water was free from the dangerous germs in our rivers and dams that make all waterways unsafe. But possibly most exciting was the ringing of the Cape Vultures.

The place was Robert's Farm in the Magaliesberg near Rustenburg. Here they were breeding in the shadows of the steep cliffs.

Reaching them entailed quite a long 45 degree climb to the base of the cliffs. There was an opening leading to a narrow ledge on which the vultures had their untidy nests. They only laid one egg although there had been occasions in the past when the food supply had been exceptional and they laid three eggs.

Most nests were easy to reach, but there were places that were extremely difficult and dangerous to get to.

I used to go to Hank Hofland's gym in Loveday street and had made friends with some young chaps who were keen mountaineers. When I told them about the difficult spots in the vulture colony they immediately said that if I wanted to borrow a proper mountaineering rope they would gladly lend us one.

NATURE: CAPE VULTURES

Obviously this was an offer we could not refuse and a few weeks later a friend of mine, Johnny Holmes and I were on the way to Robert's Farm with a beautiful mountaineering rope. I had received full instructions on how to use it. I was the first to try the difficult areas so with the rope secure around my waist and Johnny Holmes anchoring me I started making my way along the ledge. I loved the sight of vultures flying below me and sometimes coming in to settle. There was only one vulture sitting on its single egg and they often sit very tight and refuse to fly off. So much so that we would often have to push them off.

But this one flew off as I approached and I carefully stepped past the nest. I was already about 20 meters further when I realised that I had dragged the rope through the nest, broken the rotten egg and pulled the rope through its evil-smelly contents.

I refuse to describe the feelings of disappointment, depression, despondency and the smell of the rope at the back of the car on the way home. Suffice it to say that we packed up, took a few photographs, climbed back down and made our way home.

I had the unpleasant task to tell the mountaineer who had given me the rope what had happened. He told me not to worry, not under any circumstances to try and wash it. He would wash it himself, I must just leave it at the gym where he would fetch it. I took it to the gym and Hank Hofland was not happy to leave this foul-smelling thing inside the gym but said that I could leave it on the balcony where no one could smell it.

About a week later Hank phoned me and said that no one collected the rope and the smell was so bad it was coming through the balcony door. I must please come and fetch it immediately.

I did this and contacted the mountaineer, arranged to meet him and give him the rope.

A week later I phoned him. I felt really bad and wanted to pay him for ruining his rope but he said not to worry as he had washed and fixed it. I asked him if he was sure that it was alright and he said: " Oh yes it's fine ! Just smells like rotten vulture eggs!"

Fireplace Design - the warmth of home

Having a fireplace in your home can increase the value of your home as fireplaces rank as one of the top three amenities home buyers look for in a home... It is interesting to note that 60% of new homes now have fireplaces.

One of the biggest debates about fireplaces is – which kind is best – wood, gas or electric? Here are some pros and cons of each:

Wood Burning Fireplaces

Pros – Most authentic; provide that wonderful wood burning scent; HIGH cosy factor.

Cons – Hassle – buying/storing/carrying wood; lighting and tending the fire; clean up; chimney maintenance.

Gas Fireplaces

Pros – Gives the effect of wood burning without the cost and hassle; does not need a chimney; ease of lighting; no clean up; HIGH-ish cosy factor.

Cons – No wood burning scent!

Electric Fireplaces

Pros – Easy to install; inexpensive; can fit in any space; come in a wide variety of styles.

Cons – No wood burning scent! MEDIUM cosy factor.

You can use these pros and cons to make your decision, but the type of fireplace you choose is a very personal one. One of our clients has both wood burning and gas fireplaces in their home. We asked them which they liked best. The husband favours a wood burning fireplace for the smell and the crackle, and he enjoys tending the fire. His wife prefers gas for the ease of lighting and the low maintenance.

Let us get back to the “warmth of home” idea, which we think any type of fireplace can create in a home, no matter what the temperature is outside. When we begin to design a room with a fireplace, it becomes the critical element in the room that defines how the space is organized – from the seating to the flow of the space. “Sitting by the fire” whether lit or not, becomes the purpose of the room. Just walking into a room with a fireplace evokes a sense of warmth and home – call it cosy, call it the “warmth of home.” In addition, we find that no matter what the style of a home is, the presence of a fireplace helps to create that feeling.

In many of our projects, the fireplace in any room creates the focal point, designates a place to gather around and captures the “warmth of home.” A fireplace draws you into the room to take a seat by the fire and listen to music or grab a great book.

Dining room fireplaces are such a luxury. Sitting around a dining table with friends, having a wonderful meal and conversation, is the best!

A Family Room is not a Family Room without a fireplace. It is the official family gathering place for movie night, rugby, soccer, or a game of Scrabble.

Moreover, our very favourite room where a fireplace just makes you want to linger – the master bedroom. There is nothing more luxurious than staying in bed by a fire on a cold wintry day or a dreary rainy day.

Let us help you create a warm cosy room, by installing the fireplace of your dreams this winter!

Remembering André Marx

One year has passed since the loss of André Marx a long term member of the Dainfern Nature Association.

André was one of the first members of the committee and gave over 20 years of his time to the Nature Association. With his passion and knowledge André made a huge contribution. One of his successes was leading Bird Walks in Dainfern. His knowledge was absolutely amazing. On hearing a bird call he would stop the group and describe the species in detail, its features and way of life. He was unbelievably gifted. In 2022 André was awarded a BirdLife South Africa Owl Award.

However, André's knowledge extended beyond birdlife. He was the sounding board to decisions regarding the estate's natural environment and assisted in creating new trails. He was always the person too who measured and kept us updated on rainfall patterns.

André even presented at the DNA AGMs. One, which we will never forget, he described in detail the changing birdlife and animal life due to the environmental changes. Everyone was glued to the presentation and he received a standing ovation.

The Dainfern Nature Association decided last year in honour of André to name the DNA trophy the ANDRÉ MARX TROPHY. The trophy, depicting a Paradise Flycatcher, is presented to any Dainfern Golf Estate resident who has done something extraordinary for nature within the estate. It is on display in a glass cabinet at the entrance to the Clubhouse for all to see along with a photo of André.

The Nature Association also placed a bench, in honour of André, where one can ponder and have fond memories of our colleague, mentor and friend!

André Marx's memory will live on in Dainfern forever.

Black Heron (Egret)

Egretta ardesiaca

This is the darkest heron in our region with overall black plumage. On the head, the crown shows a shaggy crest of black feathers which starts on the hind crown and the nape. The eyes are bright yellow and the bill and legs are black. Adult birds show feet that are a bright yellow, and this contrast is very conspicuous in flight and is an important identification feature.

ANIMATED GALLERY

This species prefers shallow waters, such as the edges of freshwater lakes and ponds. It can also be found in marshes, river edges, and flooded grasslands. In coastal areas it occurs on tidal flats, lagoons and estuaries. In our estate it is an occasional visitor to the river edge and some of the quieter dams with shallow wading areas. They have adapted well to man-made wetlands, particularly sewage works.

The Black Heron (which is also known as the Black Egret) is known for its typical fishing method, known as "canopy feeding". It walks slowly or quickly in shallow water after prey, and will then spread its wings and arch them forwards and over the head, until the primary tips touch the water. At that point the bird resembles a small umbrella shape over the water, remaining motionless for a couple of seconds while using its feet to scrape the mud in order to flush out prey, which becomes more visible when the bird shuts out the sun and its reflection in this way. They primarily eat small fish, which they catch with this distinctive hunting technique, but they will also eat aquatic insects, crustaceans and amphibians.

Birds breed primarily in early summer, with the platform nest made up of small branches and stems, grass and leafy branches, positioned up to 6 metres above the ground or the water, in trees or reedbeds. 2-4 greyish-blue eggs are laid.

The Black Heron's populations are not threatened. It is not particularly common, but in the right habitat can be found more regularly. Dams with open, shallow water are ideal for this species, but that is a habitat type that is not prevalent on our estate as our dams are mostly filled with alien reeds. However, the bird has adapted to urban environments in some regions with artificial wetlands and man-made dams creating new areas of suitable habitat. We must ensure that our wetland habitat remains intact and that there is open water so that there are opportunities for this and other species to forage in optimum conditions.

Better Fourways NPO

Better Fourways NPO is a new initiative, launched on March 2nd this year, by Raffaella Carnicelli (Founder), Susan Harwood and Pernille Martin (directors) and committee members Trish Guilford and Karen Cox who have all lived in the Fourways area for over twenty years.

These ladies are determined to change the negative narrative surrounding the Fourways area and with a shared vision and a passion for creating change, they will strive to restore Fourways to its former glory. The efforts of this initiative will benefit homeowners and business which currently suffer due to the ageing infrastructure, increased volumes of traffic and the strain on the water and sewerage systems.

Carnicelli says "We are asking individuals and families within the Fourways area to commit at least R130/month and businesses R1000. In total, the monthly budget to upgrade and keep the areas maintained will amount to R80 000. We already have some impressive support and the more people who jump in to join us, the more we can do, sooner, to rid our streets of litter and slum-like conditions we are currently witnessing. With an ethos of transparency, we are going to account for every cent which will be used for the beautification of the area and everyone can rest assured the funding received will not be lining someone's pocket!"

Interested parties should visit our website betterfourways.org.za and our Facebook page, Better Fourways for bank account and other details.

ANIMALS MATTER

Jeanette Furstenburg • 082 445 8422 • jeanette@animalsmatter.co.za

Is your pet affecting your relationship

I have noticed an increase in behavioural cases where pets are creating friction in the home, particularly in situations where couples have decided to live and move in together. As an example, the tension begins when Partner A (with two dogs and one cat) moves into Partner B's house (who has two dogs), with the owners giving little to no thought as to how to integrate the animals. This process could either have a happy ending or turn out to be a total disaster, not only for a particular animal but for the actual relationship itself.

How many of us would take our own children and move into a partner's home with existing children, without considering the needs of all of them? Would we just arrive and place them in the other home with step siblings without proper introductions? It would be unfeeling and unfair of us to expect them all to get along straight away, to not feel threatened, to adapt immediately. Why would our animals feel any differently?

Each household will have had their own set of rules where their pets were living previously. Is the dog/cat allowed to sleep on the bed/couch? Is your partner happy to have cat fur on their favourite black suede armchair? Do your dogs sleep inside or outside? How can one ensure the safety of Partner A's cat with Partner B's dogs if they have never been exposed to cats before? These types of questions need to be raised and thoroughly discussed prior to the move. Animals have emotions and deserve to live happily. Set them, and your relationship, up for success and not failure.

Our “Cover Up” initiative starts with immediate effect

As we go forward into the winter months, we ask that you bring some winter warmth to those who need it. Our “Cover Up” initiative starts with immediate effect and we’d like to distribute blankets, beanies and warm clothing just before Nelson Mandela Day, which is July 18th July. Please deliver to 1361 Wednesdays from 08h30-11h30.

Thank You!

Thanks to generous donations from those who support Bags of Love, we were able to purchase a new wheelchair for a lady in an impoverished community, who had her leg amputated due to complications with diabetes. Her teen daughter looks after her and we also gifted them each with a brand-new handbag (courtesy of Louise Janovsky) filled with a nice selection of essential toiletry items.

Donations

We donated a beautiful cot, story books and baby clothes to the Bunny Bees Childcare Centre for new addition. Also in Thabo Mbeki informal settlement, the Ma Lizzy Daycare Centre was gifted with Easter treats, along with the usual monthly groceries which we supply.

Sandwich-making

As always, our resident sandwich-making angel, Ingrid Conroy, provided refreshments for the Lovemore Foundation Clean-up team every Saturday, for which they are eternally grateful.

WE ALSO RECEIVED:

- ♥ 2 x 30kg tubs of non-perishable food, always put together by resident Bradley Farr. These tubs are specially curated to supply a family with a month’s supply of food and are an absolute treasured gift for those who have lost their entire possessions in shack fires. One was delivered to an unemployed, abandoned woman in Alex Township who was starving, trying to keep her two children alive with scraps of food.
- ♥ 16 beautiful new handbags from CDP Gifts (Louise Janovsky) for use in our various projects.
- ♥ Two good-as-new walkers and a new raised toilet seat for the elderly were kindly donated by residents and gifted to members of the Pat Rico old age home in Rustenburg.
- ♥ A large set of laundry shelves* from a Dainfern family which we donated to the Village of Joy safe home for youngsters. We also handed out lunchbags and t.shirts donated to us by Ayni Marketing. *The transportation of the shelves was provided by a member of the Thabo Mbeki Community (Champion Transport). We have used this reliable team several times in the past for distribution of goods and they are highly recommended. Contact Champion on 062 417 0512 if you require their services.
- ♥ 800 packets of Kelloggs instant noodles, from Andrew Ross of Chaos Theory, which were distributed far and wide into several communities. They were greatly appreciated by all who said they were delicious!

Wise Grandmothers

Liked by tanglewoodpete and 36 others
korucamp We always love the calm energy that the Nlopfu Gogos from @elephantsalive bring to Koru Camp! As the matriarchs of their families, these wise grandmothers offer guidance and knowledge for the next generation, expecting little in return. For that, we wholeheartedly believe they are not only a key part of the long-term strategy to engage and empower our wildlife communities, but they also deserve a little treat too 🍌
Swipe 📱 to hear what they have to say about their time with us (sorry about the lions 🐾)
As always, a huge thank you to the Elephants Alive team as well as the @tanglewood_foundation and @susan.harwood2 for the wonderful gifts to make these women feel extra special!
📷 @jaydeemelody15

OUR CURRENT WISH LIST:

- ♥ Blankets, beanies & warm clothing (all in good condition please!)
- ♥ Sandwiches, fruit and cold-drinks (every Friday for collection on Saturday)
- ♥ Sanitary pads, toiletries for the Dignity packs
- ♥ Non-perishable food supplies
- ♥ Footwear (trainers) for sizes 1-4
- ♥ Soccer balls, boots and socks

Young visionaries transforming industries

Imagine this... no one is rich, no one is poor- everyday is a bank account and time is our currency. Now tell me; how valuable is your currency?

Dainfern Business Club member, Komani Dhlamini is an entrepreneur who has an extremely valuable currency - the currency of time. He works as a full time legal consultant and manages to run a business simultaneously, not to mention being full time father and husband as well...all of this in twenty-four hours.

Looking for a husband for hire? Uncle for hire? Gardener for hire? Dhlamini's business, CompleteMan Building Solutions, can gladly assist you with just that! It specializes in home repairs and maintenance and as the name suggests- CompleteMan, you can receive an all-in-one handy man at one stop. CompleteMan offers various subscription options and fees that allow you to receive a certain number of hours for handy man services during a month that you may use as you please. Whether you would like your light bulb fixed, your lawn mowed or something as little as getting your dishes washed - CompleteMan can gladly offer these services to you.

Dhlamini refers to himself as old school and although he is still trying to understand the tricks and trade of social media, his subscriptions grow at an average of ten subscriptions per month with the classic tale of 'word of mouth'. He believes his involvement with Dainfern Business Club can certainly help grow his business with simply spreading the good news of CompleteMan.

When Dhlamini started this business, he thought to himself, "If you are going to do this thing and one person is willing to buy it- then there are definitely many others that will be willing to buy it too." - this is one of the mentalities he believes entrepreneurs should possess, in order to build successful businesses.
