Dear Residents

Latest Nature Teams Update

By Olivia, Youngson and teams

Maintenance

The nature team are continuing with the grasslands maintenance and cutting back in areas which were left in the summer months for small creatures to take refuge in. Areas: Olive Walk, Olive Walk grasslands, 5th Hole, 6th T areas, Rocky Ridge, 7th fairway, 8th fairway. Also, in these areas Acacia trees had self-seeded and have had to be removed separately by hand.

The team also removed invasives in areas and will continue to remove self-seeded Acacias in other areas too as these can become a future problem.

Saw grass areas are currently being maintained, and we are having to keep on top of the Water Hyacinth and other general maintenance in that area.

Once each area of grass has been cut, the team have to rake and remove the moribund off the grass areas in order for Rhizomes to get more light in for a healthy grass season moving forward.

Birds and Beasties

We have had quite a few spotting's of porcupines who cheekily enjoy our residents' plants. The joys of living in and around nature! How lucky we are!

Above: A very big spider's web spotted by resident Sue Harwood.

Far left: Another very interesting photograph taken by resident Sue Harwood. Our local ecologist confirmed they are the caterpillars of Processionary Moths. The hairs may give one a rash so best not to touch them.

Left: Jenna Harwood found a one-day Moth called the Crimson Speckled Flanky. Sadly found dead on her carpet here in Dainfern. It is quite a rare sighting.

Bird Walk Feedback

Around 20 enthusiastic birders met on a beautiful crisp morning at the Dainfern Clubhouse for the autumn/early winter walk organised by the Dainfern Nature Association. Some of the usuals were there along with some new folk, even from Helderfontein, joined Wim Spronk Jr for the 90-minute morning walk.

Most of the migrants have already left for their summer homes, and a lot of local birds had shed their bright summer breeding plumage, so it made for a tough and determined effort to identify the bird species that remain here during winter. The walk didn't disappoint with the group identifying around 30 different species. From Brown Hooded Kingfishers to a group of Speckled Mousebirds warming themselves up in the sun and a pair of Black Sparrow Hawks also seen close up.

The DNA would like to thank those who joined us and look forward to the next Bird Walk that will probably take place in spring.

Keep a look out on the social media posts for the date.

Mother's Day

The Mother's Day weekend started off with a gifting pop-up market at the Clubhouse and a few moms were spotted buying "to Mom, from Mom" gifts. On Sunday families celebrated the day at SIX33 with a special Mother's Day menu, and children were kept busy with fun activities.

SHOULD YOU BUY PROPERTY IN YOUR NAME, A COMPANY, OR A TRUST?

The importance of the correct structure for your property investment portfolio

If you want to build up a property investment portfolio over your lifetime (which is the best way to build wealth), there is no other option than having a proper structure. Below are our top reasons for having the correct structuring for your property investment portfolio.

When you acquire investment properties, it is imperative to acquire them in a company with a Holdings Trust holding the shares of the company or in a Property Trust.

RUN YOUR PROPERTY PORTFOLIO LIKE A BUSINESS: I always say that buying a property in your name is like running a business out of your savings account. It may be cheaper, but it will not help you build credibility or enable you to get funding or financing in the future.

BUILD A BIGGER PROPERTY PORTFOLIO: Buying property in the correct structure makes it possible to build a much bigger portfolio than what you would be able to build in your name. You very quickly reach a ceiling when acquiring investment property in your personal name.

TAX BENEFITS OF THE CORRECT STRUCTURE: Owning properties in a company with the shares held in a Holdings Trust provides great tax benefits. When a company owns property, it is, in most instances, taxed at a lower tax rate than if you hold the property in your personal capacity.

PROTECT YOUR ASSETS: The reason why a trust should always be the owner of all assets, either directly, as is the case with the Family Trust or Property Trust or indirectly, as is the case with the Holdings Trust that holds the shares of the companies that own the property, is that assets are protected. If anything happens to you financially, you want to ensure that your assets are well protected, which can only be effectively done through trusts.

ESTATE PLANNING BENEFITS: One of the greatest benefits of the correct structures is that it does not form part of your estate when you pass away or if you are declared insolvent. This also means that there are no estate duties, capital gains tax, executor fees, or transfer fees on death.

SOLAR POWER

Contact sales@ssesa.co.za • www.ssesa.co.za

What do I need to know about Solar PV for my home?

Why Choose Solar PV (photovoltaic) for your home?

In South Africa we have unreliable power supply and sharply escalating electricity prices, while Solar PV is very affordable and easily financed by your own banker. In South Africa Solar is the most successful alternative energy source – save on energy and avoid loadshedding, with breakeven on capex within five years. Probably the best return on an investment today.

How much will it cost to power my home?

Dependent on monthly usage and your budget, here are some estimates based on an optimised Solar PV design: *estimates:

up to 650 units pm 1P	to 1100 units pm 1P	up to 1500 units pm 3P
approx R97k*	approx R155k*	approx R180k*
5kVA inverter; 5.5kWp panels; 5kWh L-ion	8kVA inverter; 8.8kWp panels; 10kWh L-ion	12kVA 3P inverter; 11kWp panels; 15kWh L-ion
1P = single phase 3P = three phase pm = per month k = 1000 prices ex VAT

How do I know I am getting the best quality solar PV system?

Your hybrid Energy Storage Solution (ESS) full cost should include:

1. A hybrid inverter sized to solar array;
2. Lithium-Ion batteries with minimum 10 year warranty, please check the maximum and continuous rate of discharge (we advise 1C max and at least 0.5C continuous discharge), must be compatible with the inverter;
3. Tier 1 monocrystalline panels (limited performance warranty of 25-35 years);
4. All SANS10142 electrical components, roof mountings, cabling etc;
5. Certificate of Compliance (to be completed by three-phase electrician for SSEG)
6. Installation costs, contractors' insurance, compulsory SSEG registration

What do I look for in my installer?

The important questions to ask the prospective installer at quote phase are:

1. A full site visit and helioscope design upon acceptance of quote.
2. A valid PV Greencard certificate.
3. Must include your SSEG application? <https://ssesa.co.za/sseg-applications/>
4. What support is offered?
5. The workmanship guarantee period and any call out or other costs involved?
6. An optional Service Level Agreement (SLA) available – cleaning of panels, issue of COC every two years on expiry, monitoring etc.
7. Look at reviews platforms like Google, Trustpilot
8. Does the installer also service the commercial sector?

LEGAL MATTERS

Navigating International Commercial Law and Contracts: Mitigating Risks for Business Success

Contact Zinta Strydom, Commercial Director at zinta@richeattorneys.co.za

In today's globalised business environment, companies often operate across multiple jurisdictions, each with its own set of laws, regulations, and cultural norms. International commercial law is a complex and ever-changing legal landscape. It covers a broad range of topics, from contract law to business transactions, and from intellectual property rights to data privacy.

In the ever-evolving landscape of commerce, businesses face a myriad of legal challenges that can significantly impact their operations and bottom line. From contract disputes to regulatory compliance, understanding and effectively navigating commercial law while operating in various jurisdictions is essential for mitigating risks and ensuring sustained success. In this article, I explore ways of mitigating your multi-jurisdictional contracting and compliance risks.

A common way of apportioning risk in a contract is for the parties to limit or exclude their liability to one another. This can take various forms as some clauses may exclude liability entirely, others may cap it or restrict the type of losses that are recoverable or the remedies that are available. What you want to achieve is a position where you assess your company risks to establish your liability limit which you want to standardise across all your contracts. This requires a further exercise to establish a list of relevant laws that impact on the services your company provides in various jurisdictions, which often leaves companies overwhelmed.

While there are some common terms and/or similarities, each regional company normally maintains its own version of contract templates. The ultimate ideal is to harmonise contracting structures and templates both globally and across all product / service lines to promote uniformity representing your company as a cohesive, global leader in the marketplace.

To address these challenges proactively, companies have to turn to legal playbooks as a strategic tool for standardising their approach to risk management. A legal playbook is a comprehensive document that outlines standard positions, strategies, and protocols for addressing common legal issues and risks encountered by a company. It serves as a reference guide for key stakeholders, providing them with clear and consistent guidance on how to respond to various legal scenarios. While legal playbooks are typically tailored to the specific needs and objectives of a company, they can also be adapted to address regional challenges and considerations.

One of the key advantages of utilising a legal playbook is its ability to incorporate regional nuances and factors into the risk mitigation strategy. By customising the playbook to account for these regional differences, organisations can better anticipate and address potential legal challenges. This principle can also be used if you operate in one jurisdiction. Do you have your legal playbook ready?

GARDENING

To do list:

June gardening chores

- Water shrubs and plants with shallow root systems like azaleas and camellias during the dry spell in summer-rainfall areas
- Collect seed from late summer annuals like zinnias, cosmos, cleomes (spider flowers), gaillardias and hollyhocks.
- Lift gladioli corns, shake off the soil, then store in a cool, dry place in paper or net bags, discard damaged bulbs. If lifting dahlias, keep them covered with slightly moist sand or sawdust to prevent them from drying out.
- Take cuttings of plants like fuchsias, heliotrope and daisy bushes and soft sappy plants like impatiens and plectranthus which are intolerant of cold, wet weather.
- Trim flower stalks from old liliiums leaving a stump to mark their position. Buy liliium bulbs, keep them moist or plant them temporarily in pots.
- Pinch off faded flowers from Iceland poppies, calendulas, violas, and pansies to encourage further flowers.
- Foliar feed all existing annuals and bulbs fortnightly or use organic compost before the cold weather sets in.
- Cover sensitive plants in colder regions with lightweight, frost cover, hessian, straw, or cardboard boxes.
- Lay down thick mulch or contour compost around the frost susceptible plants to insulate the roots.
- Clean up under hedges, clean out gutters and drains, rake up fallen leaf litter and other debris, loosen the soil to expose insect pests which may be sheltering there.

Birding DAINFERN

By the late André Marx (Archive)

Black-backed Puffback

Dryscopus cubla

The Black-backed Puffback is an attractive member of the African bushshrike family and occurs in well treed gardens in the estate. The upper parts are black with white markings and the underparts are white. The female is a little duller than the male and shows less black on the head. A strong ID feature of this bird is the bright red eye, something that other shrikes do not show. As the name suggests this species is known for its courtship display, when males will fluff up their rump plumes to create the appearance of a white ball, a wonderful spectacle to witness.

This is a species of thick bush, woodland, and gardens where there are enough trees. Birds often occur in pairs, moving about in the upper strata, sometimes in mixed species flocks with other birds. Their food consists mostly of insects with caterpillars, beetles, ants and termites taken, and with the diet being supplemented with fruit and bulbs.

As has been mentioned before, if a bird has a distinctive song or call it can be identified long before you get to see it, and the Black-backed Puffback is no exception to that rule. Usually the male will utter an unmistakable "chick-weeu, chick-weeu", with the first syllable carrying an almost metallic clicking sound. Then you just need to home in on the sound to find the birds in the canopy of some tree.

A monogamous species, the Black-backed Puffback breeds mostly in the period September-December. The female builds a tidy cup shaped nest while the male helps in the gathering of materials, consisting of grass, roots and bark bound together using spider webs. Two to three eggs are laid and incubated by the female for 13-14 days. Both parents feed the chicks which are able to leave the nest after about 18 days, but will be dependent on their parents for another three weeks.

The Black-backed Puffback is common within its distribution, and does well in habitats such as suburban gardens with good trees. It is not as regular as many other common garden birds but is being seen more frequently within the Dainfern environment as the estate and surrounding areas is converted to a woodland area over time. It is not threatened and we should continue to enjoy the presence of this wonderful bird in our estate provided we refrain from using harmful insecticides and ensure the existing tree cover persists.

By Grant Fairley • Ecologist@SES • 082 330 8527

The Humble Bee

the most important living thing on earth

African honeybee (Eng.); heuningby (Afr.); inyosi (isiXhosa), nyoxi (Xitsonga).

It's sting burns a lot, but if they were to disappear, it would hurt much, much more.

The African honeybee is an important pollinator of flowering plants, including many of our thorn trees. Honeybees are used to pollinate about 50 crops across South Africa, including sunflower seeds and subtropical fruit found in the northern region of South Africa.

Imagine your world without all the fruits and vegetables we rely on for a healthy diet!

Food production depends on bees as 70% of agricultural crops rely on the pollination of a species of bee to produce a seed or fruit. Even grazing depends on bees as they pollinate the grass flower which allows a viable seed to form which in turn allows the grass plant to reproduce.

Almost everything we eat has had the favour of a bee somewhere in the process of production before it provides us with sustenance.

The Earthwatch Institute have concluded that bees are the most important living being on the planet and made an announcement that they face extinction.

Bee populations around the world have reduced by up to 90% and in some regions have disappeared altogether.

Threats to bees: Monoculture.

Huge crops like Almond and Avocado orchards are pollinated by colonies brought in from far and the bees die when the season is done. They are not taken home again.

Yes, tens of millions of bees die for Almond milk every year.

Pesticides.

Spray for a bug eating your flowers in your garden and you kill bees.

Commercial farmer spray entire fields killing all the bees over a wide area.

Habitat loss and fragmentation.

Urbanisation has reduced the flowering plants in many areas.

Invasive plants and invasive bees.

Invasive plants have lower nectar and pollen yields and foreign bees carry disease and compete for resources.

Low genetic diversity.

Bees are all closely related to others of the same species and a disease can therefore kill an entire colony very quickly.

Pathogens spread by commercially managed bees.

Bee keepers bring in hives to pollinate crops and diseases spread to the natural population.

Our Bees

The African honeybee subspecies (Apis mellifera scutellata) is native to central and most of southern Africa. The African honeybee is one of two subspecies of honeybees in South Africa – the other being the Cape honeybee (A. m. capensis), which is found in the winter rainfall area.

The African honeybee occurs in the natural veld of South Africa (except the Western Cape and some parts of the Eastern Cape) and central Africa. Some crops like sunflowers or subtropical fruit are important forage resources for managed honeybee colonies and beekeepers often trap wild swarms in these regions. Managed honeybees can abscond from hives to become wild again, and therefore the wild and managed honeybees are all related.

Food

Honeybees forage on nectar (carbohydrates) and pollen (protein) of flowering plants, and they require a large diversity of pollen and nectar from different plant sources to be healthy. While some beekeepers may supplement a colony's food with sugary water, this is not a long-term or healthy option. African honeybee beekeepers use a variety of plant species (including indigenous plants, crops and weeds) as forage resources for their bees.

The honeybee is a social insect feeding on pollen and nectar of flowering plants, while at the same time providing the essential service of transferring pollen from one flower to another – thereby facilitating pollination and the reproduction of flowering plants.

Early summer is swarm season. A new queen may be heading off to start a new colony or a colony may be leaving their hive for a better neighbourhood.

The Honey Bee found in Gauteng is prized by honey farmers for the quality and quantity of the honey it produces and its ferociousness and hard-working habit.

Its ferocity is ingrained from centuries of adapting to the harsh hot African sun, and the constant irritation of robbing by animals (humans too), intent on stealing its plentiful supply of honey.

It is these bees which have become notorious as the 'African Killer Bee' in South America and southern North America after they were introduced from a Pretoria apiary for experimental breeding purposes. It must be stated however, that this reputation has been somewhat enhanced and sensationalised by US media.

In late Spring and early Summer particularly after the first good rains, colonies of bees will split from the hive and a new queen and her followers (swarm) will head off to find a new hive location.

These swarms, although spectacular and maybe a little scary will often stop and rest together. In this state they are calm and peaceful and rarely sting unless provoked. Their aim is to protect and stay with the queen who will be life giver to the new hive.

If they do decide to settle in an inconvenient or sometimes somewhat silly place to start a hive, please contact a bee specialist to rehoming them.

To help these fascinating insects survive and thrive is easy to do. Only use bee friendly products in the garden and plant flowering plants for them to obtain nectar from. It's a win-win scenario.

NATURE

Birds without feathers

The earliest flying birds had no feathers. They were like flying lizards with large membranes connected to their hands and feet. They could probably glide for long distances.

Membranes are not nearly as efficient as feathers for flying.

In 1861 the first fossil of a creature known as "Archaeopteryx" was discovered. This caused great excitement! Here for the first time was a bird that lived 150 million years ago with perfect feathers! For many years scientists tried unsuccessfully to establish a link between membranes and feathers. Feathers do not fossilize easily and it would be extremely difficult to find a fossil of the creature that came before "Archaeopteryx" to see how and when feathers started to evolve. Although quite a few fossils were discovered similar to "Archaeopteryx" none could come up with the solution.

When we take a close look at a feather we can but marvel at its lightness and perfect construction. We can bend back the side shafts.

But as soon as they are realigned they simply lock into position.

Let's see why this is so. Each tiny shaft has a number of hooks that lock perfectly into the upper shaft

Almost like a zip. It is this that gives the feather its amazing strength enabling birds to fly. This must surely be one of nature's greatest inventions.

ANIMALS MATTER

Has your pet trained you?

The job of an Animal Behaviourist is to observe behaviour. Not just the animal's but that of the owners who live in the household as well.

The job of an Animal Behaviourist is to observe behaviour. Not just the animal's but that of the owners who live in the household as well. In a lot of cases, we see owners reinforcing problem behaviour inadvertently. Owing to their survival instincts, animals adapt to their environments and very soon start reading the people living in the home. Animals figure out who is the good cop or the bad cop, who can be manipulated and who is the easiest to train. Yes, animals train their owners. Ever wondered why your dog hangs around one side of the dinner table whilst they would never dare attempt to beg where you are sitting? (out of sight, out of mind). Or wonder why every time your cat walks past the feeding station, she waits for you to pick her up and plonk her on the counter? Well, she has trained you to do that. I overhear conversations where people wonder as to how their "separation anxiety" pet knows they are about to leave the house and I have a little chuckle. I can just imagine the routine that happens before that owner leaves.

Let's pretend I'm a dog. I look at the sequence of events that occur prior to my owner leaving. As an example: Owner has a shower, gets dressed, goes to kitchen, and makes coffee, grabs the car keys. At this point, as the dog, I know exactly what is going to happen – my owner is going to walk out the door and leave me alone. We have conditioned them to predict a sequence of events. We would therefore need to counter condition them to that sequence. Example: Owner has a shower, gets dressed, goes to kitchen, makes coffee, grabs keys then goes and sits down in the lounge and finish said cup of coffee. Watch the look on your dog's face when you do this. After continually changing your routine, his anxiety levels will come down as he cannot predict the sequence of events.

I see how easily our pets can manipulate us. Let's take the case of the beautiful Husky who would always go and get under the family's visitors' car when they were about to leave. The owner would have to entice him out from under the car with treats. "I don't know why he doesn't want my visitors to leave, it drives me nuts!" Well, he has trained you, hasn't he? I reply. He knows that if he goes under the car, you give him treats. Simply put, you have inadvertently reinforced a behaviour.

We need to give our pets a break and understand that often we need to look at our own behaviour to change theirs.

DAINFERN YOUNG STARS IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Mentor Dainfern Youth

Think about it, what are the chances of you bumping into the previous CEO of Discovery Health, the MD of MSC Cruises SA or the former CEO of MTN?

Pretty slim, I would say; but there is a place, a place where a person as young as 16, has not only meet such distinguished individuals but has had the rare and extraordinary opportunity to not only meet them but also engage with them. There is a place where that happens and that place is, Dainfern Business Club.

Dainfern Business Club is dedicated to nurturing the next generation of business leaders and it provides a supportive environment where young minds can connect, learn, and grow alongside more mature minds.

Members within the club have attested to the fact that, not only have they achieved a significant milestone due to an experience at the club, but they have also acquired social skills and knowledge that is not only in relation to the business aspect of things.

The importance of the club lies in its ability of empower and support young entrepreneurs and business leaders in various ways such as equipping and developing new skills, inspiring and motivating the members and providing a supportive community in order to foster innovation and entrepreneurship.

If you are reading this- and you know you have pearls of wisdom or encouragement- contact us; we can't wait to hear and receive what you have for us.

OPERATION COVER-UP!!

As is the case every year, Bags of ♥ is on a mission to bring warmth, comfort & protection to those who cannot help themselves and can ill afford the luxury of a blanket and clothing to shield them against the harsh winter ahead. And, as always, we need help from our generous community! We have had a fabulous start to this year's "Operation Cover-Up" with a generous donation from the ladies of ZOPCO who delivered 70 blankets to us on Monday! ZOPCO is a private and independent trading company, focused on sourcing of non-ferrous refined metal and concentrates. Once a year they get together to collect in-demand items, to make a difference to the lives of people – mainly focussing on women.

This year, at their Woman in Mining event, as part of their community outreach program, they requested that each participant donate a blanket. All in all they collected 200 and approached Lynton Lefevre, Brand Manager of 67 Blankets for Nelson Mandela Day SA with a view to donating them the collection. However, Lynton very kindly "paid It forward" by recommending Bags of ♥ as one of the recipients, for which we are extremely grateful.

"Nothing in life has a higher return on investment than being kind."

Bags of Fun from Bags of ♥!

The Gogos of Limpopo enjoy sponsored stays at Koru Camp in Limpopo. Koru is a non-profit organisation eco-camp empowering local communities and supporting conservation through education and meaningful nature experiences. Every two months, the matriarchs of surrounding underprivileged communities near the game reserves are treated to a stay. They receive gifts including handbags prepared (filled with luxurious & essential toiletries and snacks) by Bags of ♥. The brand new handbags are donated by CPD Gifts, also of Dainfern. Many of these lovely elderly ladies have never been on a game drive, let alone seen an elephant in "the flesh" – so its an educationally exciting experience for them! Take a look at their Instagram: linktr.ee/korucamp

Helping far and wide

We have also helped a family (with a tub of non-perishable foods, bed linen, towels and clothing) who lost everything in a shack fire, assisted a mother in distress with a critically ill baby in the Jhb CBD, provided food parcels for one of the leaders of the Ikemeleng Foundation who was brutally attacked whilst doing outreach for the mother and child above, provided clothing to another organisation for their sale to raise funds, donated blankets and two play pens to the Dog Trust/Diepsloot Dogs for keeping puppies safe during "adoption days", provided refreshments as always for the LLA team with the great sandwich maker Ingrid Conroy at the helm!

Please consider donating a blanket, jersey, scarf, pair of socks, jacket, coat, beanie or gloves – any sizes – as well as soup mixes and non-perishable foods to Bags of ♥ at 1361 Woodgreen Way in Highgate West on Wednesdays between 08h30 – 11h30.
